Music album consumption U.S. 2018, by genre

Share of total music album consumption* in the United States in 2018, by genre

GOSPEL MUSIC ACCOUNTED FOR

3.2 PERCENT

OF TOTAL MUSIC CONSUMPTION IN THE UNITED STATES IN 2018 COMPARED TO OTHER GENRES OF MUSIC.

SEE OTHER STATS SHOWN BELOW.

In 2018, hip-hop and rap music accounted for 21.7 percent of total music consumption in the United States, more than double the percentage of R&B music sales. Other highly popular genres included pop and rock music, whereas just 1.1 percent of all music sold in the U.S. in 2018 was jazz. Gospel music accounted for 3.2 per cent of total music consumption in the United States in 2018.

Why are some genres more popular than others?

Whilst music is a highly subjective medium in terms of the listener's taste and preferences, the top genres in terms of consumption tend not to fluctuate heavily. Conversely, religious music by its very nature is a niche genre in that it encompasses, describes or advocates certain beliefs, giving it the equal ability to alienate some listeners while appealing enormously to others, depending on their religious stance.

A MUST READ BOOK

True strength. Author Lynn Lee takes the reader into the dark side of marriage as a pastor's wife. From the outside looking in, their marriage seemed like paradise, but few knew the fear, distress and depression that controlled Leigh's life. The book reads like a suspense thriller, perhaps the first of its kind in the Christian genre. Watch for Part II coming soon to Amazon.com.
